This series of word-lists is the outgrowth of the conviction that the ordinary way of acquiring Homeric vocabulary is both wasteful and ineffectual. The chief difficulty in learning to read Homer lies in the large and varied character of the vocabulary required, and these lists have been prepared in order to help the student to learn Homeric words in a systematic and practical way. A moderate number of words learned each day and constantly reviewed will rapidly enlarge the student's working vocabulary, and steadily better his equipment for sight-reading. He will gradually be emancipated from the constant use of the lexicon, while his knowledge of Greek words will gain rather than lose in precision and permanence. Each day a few new words should be learned, and those previously learned should be rapidly reviewed. The student will very shortly find himself possessed of a vocabulary which will greatly facilitate the work of translation, and make the reading of Homer at sight a pleasant and natural exercise. In short, it is believed that the mastery of these lists will secure for the student that much-talked-of thing, the ability to read Homer; and make of his study of it a means, not simply of discipline, but of enjoyment and culture.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

The demand for a new edition of these lists has given us the opportunity to correct some misprints and to modify a few definitions. The numberings remain unchanged throughout. Attention may be called to the fact that in the statistics of verb occurrences, compounds have been reckoned with their primitives. In this we have followed the procedure of Gehring's Index Homericus, upon the materials of which our statistics are based.
